Camp Internet's Online English Language Program 'Enhancing English Literacy Through Technology'

Teachers of English are invited to enroll in an Internet - delivered English Reading and Language Arts program focused on English Literature analysis and interpretation to build reading, writing, comprehension, and conversational skills.

Program Format Camp Internet's award-winning distance learning programs offer English language classrooms a cost effective means to access and enjoy classic English Literature by Mark Twain, Robert Louis Stevenson, Helen Hunt Jackson, Henry Richard Dana, Willa Cather, Jack London, and other important authors. Camp Internet has full e-texts and excerpts of important literature online – plus provides the historical context, author biographies, and period art related to the famous stories. Enrolled teachers first select thematic online reading assignments for their students. This is then followed by English comprehension assignments where students participate in live, online reading and writing exercises that increase student familiarity with appropriate use of the English language. Camp Internet assists teachers in using information technologies to enhance learning in the classroom and to improve student use of the English language in formal written and informal conversational settings using live, interactive online communication and digital publishing tools.

Training Options Enrolled teachers are offered two training options – one is an online workshop delivered via the Internet, and the other adds-on a live 5-day teacher training workshop held in California and regionally worldwide. The online workshop is a self-guided set of activities that instruct teachers on how to access and use English Literature activities in their classrooms and is available year round for all enrolled teachers. The live, in-person workshops include the same English Literature activity unit plus adds a 5-day focused information technology integration unit that provides opportunities for Lead Teachers to visit American classrooms and to learn techniques for online curriculum unit development, digital photography, GPS/GIS mapping technologies, and self-publishing projects for teachers and their students.

Online English Programs run Sept 2003-June
2004
